Indian Social Institute (ISI), Bangalore

Indian Social Institute (ISI), Bangalore, was established in 1963 as the Training Unit of Indian Social Institute, Delhi. Though ISI was located in Bangalore, right from the beginning it was a national centre but specially focusing on the four southern states. In 1993, ISI-Bangalore became a national centre with special focus on training the social activists and leaders from the marginalized communities. Over the last five decades or more, the Institute has been accompanying the people from the marginalized communities through training, research, documentation, networking and advocacy.

The ISI Bangalore is not an implementing agency but works in and through the CBOs, NGOs, CSOs and other like-minded individuals and organizations. With the mission of accompanying the distress migrant workers from north and eastern Indian States in south India, ISI started Labour and Migration Unit on 1st May 2015. The Unit aims at upholding human dignity, human rights, labour rights and well-being of such distress migrant workers in 5 south Indian States. The activities of the Unit include: Forming groups of migrant workers; conducting training programmes for workers; organising consultations; conducting seminars/workshops for college students and civil society; conducting researches; and, providing help desk services.
